WHERE'S JOE MULHATTON?

Here's a Darling Little Sunday-School Story for the Home Marines.

A special from Barbourville says there is a peculiar case of bone-breaking in that vicinity that is attracting the attention of the medical fraternity throughout half the state. Mrs. Peter Kelly, wife of a well known citizen is the victim of a disease which the local surgeons and doctors, for want of a better name, call fragilitas osium. Mrs. Kelly, who is a delicate lady, was just getting around after a long and serious illness when, a few nights since, she got out of bed and started down stairs to get a drink of water.

When but a few steps down one of the bones of her right leg broke with a peculiar glass-like snap, without having come in contact with anything and from no apparent cause. She called her husband and he picked her up and started back toward the bedroom with his wife, when the bones of her right and left arms broke in several places with the same peculiar snap heard and felt by the woman when the first fracture occurred.

Mrs. Kelly was carried to the bedroom and laid on her bed when the bones of her left leg broke in the same manner. A surgeon was immediately sent for. He set the broken limbs and bandaged them. Mrs. Kelly said she felt no pain when any of the fractures occurred and that the setting and bandaging of her broken limbs occasioned her not the slightest discomfort.

The disease is a strange one and the outcome is awaited with a great deal of curiosity and interest. The physicians say the bone-breaking is caused by a deficiency of animal and a superabundance of mineral matter in the bones. They say the bones will knit very rapidly, but that the disease is difficult to cure.

HONESTY REWARDED.

Larkin Lyle Walk'd Through the Hills and Reported to the Governor.

The Commercial Gazette of Sunday contained an article from Vanceburg that is an unique and interesting bit of local history. In 1836 Larkin Lyle was tried in the criminal court of the district for the crime of biting off the lip of one Edward Campbell. The jury gave him a year in the penitentiary.

"Buck" Parker was then Sheriff of Lewis county and instead of sending Lyle to jail told him to go home.

The next day Parker rode out to Lyle's home and found him "cuttin' corn."

"Hello, Larkin," shouted Parker.

"Hello, Buck; good mornin'."

"Hard at work, I see."

"Yep; gettin' my hand in so's won't go hard with me when I gits to Frankfort."

"When do you think you will be ready to start, Larkin?"

"I can't jist tell yet, Buck."

"Well, about when, then?"

"You see, Buck, I've a heap of things to look arter. The corn is to cut, the shoats to pen and in fact everything afore a body is ready to be gone a year."

"All right, Larkin; Frankfort has done without you so far and I reckon they can wait till a body gets all of his things together, and if I don't see you again between now and the time you are ready come over to the burg and we will start."

In three weeks Lyle reported to Parker that he was ready.

Larkin decided he would hunt through to Frankfort and Parker would go by Maysville and the stage coach.

Parker remarked that there was a lot of fine hunting in store for him on the way.

Larkin arrived at Frankfort, reported to Governor Clark and approaching the Executive said, "Be you the Governor?"

I am sir, "what will you have of me?"

"Put me in the penitentiary; I hit a fellow in Lewis and the Jedge guv me a yer."

"I know nothing about your case, sir, and have no authority to confine you."

"Where is the Sheriff?"

Haint he never cum! He's on the stage and orter been here afore this; I'm kinder skerd erbout him."

While they were talking in walked Parker.

Well, now said the Governor, let's understand the business. A prisoner hunts through the woods to Frankfort, and the Sheriff takes the stage. Did you know, Mr. Sheriff, you were responsible for his safety and arrival to Frankfort?"

"Certainly, I knew all that."

"I knew just what I was doing. If you knew Larkin as well as I do, you wouldn't have been afraid to trust him either. I hope you will pardon me for not hunting along with him."

"Yes, I will pardon you and pardon honest Larkin Lyle too," was the Governor's reply, and the two friends started on their journey homeward.

Old Oleson.

The Cincinnati Enquirer of yesterday says: "This comedy was produced for the first time in this city at Havlin's yesterday, and drew two of the largest audiences of the present season. 'It was the first play written in which is introduced a Swedish dialect part, and that part the central figure. The play is of the sensation order, and has story enough to interest. The audiences of yesterday appeared to enjoy it hugely and the applause was liberal. Mr. Ben Hendricks as the Swede could not well be improved upon. He is a good comedian and has the Swedish dialect down very pat, as the boys would say."

He was a favorite with his audience from the start, and he was honored with a curtain call at the close of the third act, and it was a good, hearty call, too. The support is all right. Miss Lottie Williams, who, it will be remembered, started last season with the drama, "New York Day by Day," plays the somber role very nicely, and her songs and dances were liberally encored. Mr. Charles Stine made a hit as Dr. Shingle. The other members of the cast were equal to their tasks, it being a pretty good all-around company. In the last act is introduced a Swedish Lady Quartet—nice looking girls, with sweet voices that harmonize well together. They gave several songs of their native land and were well received."

MARSHALL WOODING.

TALES ABOUT HIS WONDERFUL NERVE IN PERILOUS PLACES.

How He Tanned Tough "Eph" Holland, and Defied a Crowd That Had Assembled to Kill Him.

A correspondent of The Commercial Gazette, writing from New York, has this to say of a gentleman well known in Maysville:

"I met Marshall Wooding here the other day. He is the bravest man perhaps that ever walked the streets of Cincinnati. Readers of this will recall the fact that Wooding shot 'Eph' Holland one evening about ten years ago at the Northwest corner of Fourth and Race streets, in Cincinnati. At that time gambling was in full bloom in Cincinnati, and Holland proposed to control the business. That is, he determined that if he couldn't have the lion's share of gambling privileges of Cincinnati, he would compel the authorities to close the games."

"Wooding was interested in a faro-bank, and was enraged at the boasts and threats of Holland. It was pretty well understood that the first time Wooding and Holland met there would be 'a shootin'."

"Sure enough, when they crossed paths at Fourth and Race one night, Wooding blazed away at 'Eph' and sent a ball into his right leg, below the groin. Holland recovered from the wound, but he was never after the 'Eph' Holland of old. His comb was cut and he became as gentle as a kitten."

"He told me one day in Weatherhead's drugstore that Wooding had served him right when he shot him. 'Eph' must have been in a penitent mood that day, for he said that he deserved to go to prison at the time he was sentenced for participating in the election frauds several years before. Holland died and there were those who tried to make it appear that he died of the wound inflicted by Marshall Wooding, but he didn't."

"It wasn't Wooding's fault that Holland didn't die at the time of the 'shootin'." Marshall told me that when he shot Eph he aimed at his stomach, but the revolver was hard on the trigger, and in pulling it he depressed the muzzle of the 'gun,' causing the bullet to take a downward course, which plumped it into Holland's leg instead of his abdomen."

"A plan was organized to assassinate Wooding. Bob Lynn is authority for the following: Wooding and Lynn stood in front of No. 208 Vine street discussing the situation. Wooding talked about the matter as calmly as though he were conversing about the last loaf of the box. While Wooding and Lynn stood there a crowd of men was gathering in the saloon under the Grand Opera-house, just opposite 208 Vine. Andy Gilligan kept the saloon then, but, of course, he was not a party to the plan to kill Wooding, or anybody else."

"Lynn knew that Wooding would have to settle the question of his bravery and leave on life that night, and he said to Marshall:

"'I reckon you all might as well have it over right away. It won't do to go home without showing your hand. They will think you are scared if you don't face them.'"

"'I'm powerful tired, Bob,' replied Wooding, 'and want to get some sleep. I'll go over and end the affair now, and then go home to bed.'"

"The two men walked across the street and entered the saloon. Nearly every man there was armed and ready to shoot Marshall Wooding. Sauntering into the middle of the crowd, Wooding declared himself. He exclaimed:

"'I hear that there is a lot of killers in this town who brag that they are going to fill me full of holes. Now I want to say right here that I am not afraid of any man in Ohio, and if anybody wants trouble with me he can have it right now and here.'"

"Nobody accepted the challenge, and after taking a drink, Wooding went home, and there was never afterward any question raised as to his bravery."

"One time in a small town in the South, a bully shot Marshall Wooding and nearly killed him. Wooding was confined to his bed for several weeks by the wound. During that time the bully terrorized the town, and daily proclaimed the boast that he would kill Wooding as soon as the wounded man appeared on the street. When Marshall recovered he hunted up his old enemy, and said to him:

"'I have heard of your threats against me and I've come to tell you that if you don't leave town within half an hour I'll be compelled to kill you on sight.'"

"There was something in the look or manner of Wooding that persuaded the desperado to act upon the hint, and he acted."

"Wooding married a few years ago and settled down on a farm in North Carolina. He doesn't gamble any more."

SHORT STREET SOCIETY.

C. S. Cropper of Burtonville, Lewis County, Introduced and Robbed.

C. S. Cropper of Burtonville, Lewis county, came to Maysville yesterday with a view of going to Huntington, W. Va., to-day.

In the afternoon he went to the depot to inquire about a train. He fell in with a party by the name of "Bill" Howe, who promised to introduce him into Short street society a little later in the evening.

Cropper then had $50 in his pocket. He came back to the hotel and left the greater part of the money.

About 8 o'clock he again started for the depot. Billy was ready for him and introducing him to Frank and "Red" somebody they proposed to get the girls and go over the river.

Anyhow, they got a keg of beer, the girls and the skiff, and they went.

In a short time after they arrived on the sandbar below Aberdeen one of the party took a gun out of his pocket and flourishing it around Cropper demanded that he empty his pockets. In the scuffle Cropper was shot through the instep, the ball being removed near the toes this morning.

The "gang" then left him over the river, where he laid out all night.

This morning he found his way back, without his ring, watch and a few dollars in money.

AWFUL CRIME.

Father and Daughter Slain by a Band of Negroes.

They Were Chopped to Pieces by An Ax and Then Cremated.

The indications are the Father Died Before His Daughter From Assault—Seven of Them Arrested, and the People Are Searching for More.

MOBILE, Ala., Oct. 11.—Hacked to pieces with an ax and then cremated was the awful fate of Richard L. Johnson and his charming 16-year-old daughter.

A gang of desperate Negroes is supposed to have committed the horrible crime.

The tragedy occurred at Mr. Johnson's plantation, near Davis Ferry, Monroe county, Friday night. There are no telegraph lines near the place, and the news of the awful butchery did not reach here until Monday. Seven Negroes have been arrested, and the people of the neighborhood are searching the country round about for several more who are thought to have taken part in the bloody affair.

The indications are that Johnson died in defending his daughter from the assault of the brutal blacks. That there was a terrible struggle in front of the house there can be but little doubt. The sod is torn up, and blood stains cover the grass several rods from the front entry to the house.

Just how it occurred may never be known, unless some of the ferocious blacks confess.

The first known of the crime was about midnight Friday night, when the neighbors were attracted to Johnson's home by fire, which was coming out of the roof. The house was burned to the ground, and in the morning the charred bodies of Johnson and his daughter were found. His skull had been split in half, and the body of Miss Johnson was literally hacked to pieces. A search was instituted, and at the house of Barlow Jones, three hundred yards distant, a bloody ax was found, and a shirt of a brother of Jones was found covered with blood. They were both arrested.

The people, black and white, for several miles around, have gathered at Davis Ferry, and if sufficient proof of the guilt of the arrested Negroes can be obtained, it is probable they will be lynched. The respectable blacks of the community are doing all they can to aid in bringing the guilty fiends to justice.

Johnson came to Monroe from Massachusetts in 1867, and was one of the most respected citizens of the county. His daughter was an accomplished young woman, having finished her education last year.

Mr. Johnson has another daughter named Grace, who is married to a sea captain of New York city.

Two Alleged Assassins Arrested.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Oct. 11.—Deputy marshals are engaged in hot pursuit of the men who assassinated Deputy Collectors Creed S. Cardwell, Joe Spurrier and S. D. Mather last Friday in Lincoln county. Monday two suspects were arrested. They were E. E. Patrick and E. L. Poses. Patrick is a relative of A. J. Patrick, the leader of the attacking gang, who was killed during the encounter. Two others will probably be arrested Tuesday.

Fatal Attack Between Boys.

NASHVILLE, Oct. 11.—In a general fight between white boys and Negroes in East Nashville several white boys were badly hurt. One of their number, Patrick McCormick, died Monday night from the effect of his injuries. There was some talk of lynching, and an extra guard of policemen was put on, but none of the threats materialized.
